

Call for Speakers Issued for Financial Communications Forum 2008

Event Will Be Held April 15-16, 2008 at The Princeton Club of New York; Submission Deadline is October 22

Boston, MA (September 17, 2007) – Insight Forums, LLC today announced that it has issued the Call for Speakers for the 2008 Financial Communications Forum. To be held April 15-16, 2008 at The Princeton Club of New York, the event is the 12th in the series and carries the theme “Creative Strategies for Expert Execution.” Individuals interested in presenting are asked to download the proposal document from www.insightforums.com/pdf/FCF08_Call_Speakers.rtf and to submit it on or before October 22.

“The Financial Communications Forum is long-established as the premier source of best-practice information about financial document design and production,” said Steve Weissman, Director of Insight Forums. “It has achieved this status thanks to our expert and generous presenters, and starting today, we are encouraging practitioners, consultants, industry experts, and other experienced professionals to join us in 2008.”

The Financial Communications Forum provides exclusive insights into the latest management best practices and technology innovations affecting the design, production, or distribution of documents that communicate financial information. Speaker information is available now, and sponsor and attendee information will soon be available online at www.insightforums.com/fcf2008.php.
